

Notes for Gibson Girls Website – First Draft

- Header image could be a little bit smaller/shorted—when you open up the website all you see is the image and the title, nothing at the bottom indicating there is information below. You could crop the bottom of the image so you can see the “Overview” section beginning, guiding the eye down clearer
- Top edge of header image doesn’t match the white of the background, you can kind of see a line where the image stops. Would it be possible to go into Photoshop and just white out the edge to make it seamless?
- Font size could be a little smaller for the desktop paragraphs—they should definitely be smaller for the mobile sizes.
- When you start pushing in the width of the browser, the images immediately start sliding to be small pretty quickly, especially next to the font size—make sure these elements are balanced in scale
- Footer caption text should be smaller (footer box itself could probably be not as tall since it has little text)
- Header title on the gallery page is much larger than the one on the home page, title on the gallery overlaps the image, make sure both pages match
- Gallery “Back” buttons—I feel like they should be in the same visual language as the Gallery button on the home page, with the boxes around them and centered. I like how the “Home” button looks at the bottom—you can make that the same top and bottom of the gallery. It is nice you have buttons at the top and bottom, so you don’t have to scroll all the way back up.
- The top gallery button could also have more padding above and below.
- The bottom Home button should be in the regular body space, not the footer, to keep the visual language the same as the home page.
- Footer on gallery is not the same as the one on the homepage—make sure they match in height and both have the citations.
- Captions on the gallery page – maybe only make the image names italic, leave Gibson’s name regular? Caption font size could also be a touch smaller.

- There is a ton of empty space underneath the gallery, I didn't even scroll down all the way to see the footer because I thought it was over. Would you be able to take out this empty space?
- Great job!!!
